FOR BETTER HEALTH, DRINK MORE WATER

Most people in America don't drink enough water. They drink coffee, tea, soda, energy drinks, fruit juice, alcohol, milk and just about everything except water. However, when it comes to good health, and especially when it comes to the health of the urinary system, nothing takes the place of pure water.

For starters, many of the aforementioned beverages, including coffee, tea, caffeinated sodas and alcohol are diuretics. This means they flush water from the body and actually contribute to dehydration.

When we don't drink enough water, the kidneys have to strain harder to eliminate waste. The waste also becomes more concentrated in the urine, which irritates the urinary passages and bladder. This can make a person more susceptible to urinary tract infections, urethritis, cystitis and kidney stones, but it also contributes to stress, constipation, headaches, stiffness and many other health problems.

Dehydration also adversely affects the brain. The brain is 85% water and much of the energy produced by the brain is dependent on proper hydration. Even slight decreases in brain hydration can create problems with memory and focus, anxiety, depression and other mood problems. So what are the caffeinated sodas and energy drinks doing to our kids? Could they be a factor in learning and behavioral problems? Histamine is a hormone used to ration water, so dehydration leads to higher levels of histamine and more problems with allergies and asthma.

Enjoy the sun, but be safe, too

Summer fun for families often revolves around outdoor activities at picnics, playgrounds and pools. Everyone knows that the sun can be dangerous. Excessive exposure to the sun and its harmful ultraviolet rays can cause premature aging of the skin and skin cancer.

According to the American Academy of Dermatology, children are especially at risk for the damaging effects of sun exposure. Even incurring one or two blistering sunburns can significantly increase a child's risk for developing skin cancer later in life.

Studies show that children under 16 are most vulnerable to skin damage. Young people accumulate somewhere between 50% and 80% of their lifetime sun exposure before their 16th birthday.

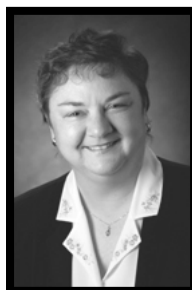

We should all seek the shade, especially between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. when the sun is most intense. Using a sunscreen with SPF 15 is a minimum recommendation. If you have fair skin, light-colored eyes and hair, freckles, or spends a lot of time outside, consider using SPF 30 or higher.

Sunscreens should be applied generously 30 minutes before going out in the sun. Use one that blocks both ultraviolet A and B (UVA and UVB) radiation.

Even if the label says "waterproof," sunscreens need to be reapplied every two to three hours. If you're spending the day at the beach or pool, be sure to reapply sunscreen after swimming.

So enjoy the sun this summer, but be safe, too!
